If the asteroid Apophis turns out to be biblical Wormwood, as I believe it will, it will collide with earth in the middle of the Great Tribulation period, generally around the same moment in dispensational history as when the Mark of the Beast arrives. As I believe Apophis is carrying an “Andromeda Strain”-type alien microbe, I suggest it has a hitchhiker virus living off of it that, on impact with our terra firma, will be jettisoned into the atmosphere and rain down a global contagion that will make Covid-19 look like a day at the park.

Let me explain.

As described on Wikipedia, the Andromeda Strain “is a 1969 techno-thriller novel by Michael Crichton documenting the efforts of a team of scientists investigating the outbreak of a deadly extraterrestrial microorganism in Arizona.”

A team from an air force base is deployed to recover a military satellite which has returned to Earth, but contact is lost abruptly. Aerial surveillance reveals that everyone in Piedmont, Arizona, the town closest to where the satellite landed, is apparently dead. The duty officer of the base tasked with retrieving the satellite suspects that it returned with an extraterrestrial contaminant and recommends activating “Wildfire,” a protocol for a government-sponsored team of scientists intended to contain threats of this nature.

The Wildfire team, led by Dr. Jeremy Stone, believes the satellite—intentionally designed to capture upper-atmosphere microorganisms for bio-weapon exploitation—returned with a deadly microorganism that kills through nearly instantaneous blood clotting. Though fiction, Crichton was lauded at the time by scientists who appreciated his attention to detail about the ability of extraterrestrial microbes or extremophiles to live in harsh environments like space where temperatures range from hundreds of degrees Fahrenheit to hundreds of degrees below zero. An extremophilic alien bacteria could not only survive such an environment, but an entire field of astrobiology called “panspermia” exists to explain how earth may have been host to such intergalactic lifeforms in the distant past.

Might such an Andromeda Strain on Apophis be the “trigger” that results in a global pandemic that leads to a mandatory universal vaccine? The Mark of the Beast?

This is an important question, because some years ago my wife Nita brought up a point we had never considered before then. Her idea quickly spread online after I mentioned it on the radio during an interview with Steve Quayle (Steve still credits Nita with this theory, one which has been often repeated by other writers and commentators since, many of whom have not given her the credit she deserves). She asked if the biblical mark of the Beast might be a conspiracy employing specific implantable health-technology only now available. Her theory was gripping: In her narrative, instead of a virus from an asteroid, she suggested an occult elite operating behind the US government might devise a virus that is a crossover between human and animal disease—let’s say, an entirely new and highly contagious influenza mutation—and intentionally releases it into the public. A pandemic ensues, and the period between when a person contracts the virus and death is something like ten days. With tens of thousands dead in a few weeks and the rate of death increasing hourly around the globe, a universal cry for a cure goes out. Seemingly miraculously, the government then steps forward with a vaccine. The only catch, the government explains, is that, given the nature of the Covid-19-like animal-human flu, the “cure” uses animal DNA and nanobots to rewrite one’s genetics so that the person is no longer entirely human. The point made was that those who receive this antidote would become part “beast,” and perhaps, thus, the title, “mark of the Beast.” No longer “entirely human” would also mean—according to her original outline—that the individual could no longer be “saved” or go to heaven, explaining why the book of Revelation says that “whosoever receiveth the mark” is damned forever (while also explaining why the ancient nephilim, whose DNA was part human and part angel and/or animal, could not be redeemed). For believers, they would know this is the mark of the Beast, as we believe the Spirit of God would confirm it in their conscious and Spirit. If they take this “cure,” they will know at the moment they have willfully submitted to damnation regardless how it is justified.

Another possibility came to me one day when watching I Am Legend starring Will Smith. If you’ve seen the film, you know it starts out with a doctor on television claiming a cure to cancer via a chimeric vaccine. The world celebrates as the global inoculation does indeed cure cancer. However, because the vaccine was a blend of human and animal genetics, it ultimately leads to a human form of rabies that nearly wipes out all life on earth. One virologist (Will Smith) appears to be the only man of earth naturally immune to the disease, and he sets out to find a cure using his blood for a new vaccine.

The show I Am Legend made me wonder if in the future a global pandemic would ensue only to have one man step forward whose blood holds the key to a cure. It turns out, he is the Antichrist and, like a dark version of communion, one can only be healed by receiving his flesh and blood via the ‘mark’ or vaccination of the beast.

In either scenario above, if one imagines the global chaos of such a pandemic, the concept of how the Antichrist “causes all,” both “small and great,” to receive this mark becomes clearer. When looking into the eyes of dying children, parents, or a spouse, it would be incredibly difficult to allow oneself to die or to encourage others to do the same when a “cure” was readily available. Lastly, this scenario would mean that nobody would be allowed to “buy or sell” in the marketplace without the Mark-cure due to the need to quarantine all but the inoculated (a real-world possibility we are witnessing right now during the coronavirus), thus fulfilling all aspects of the Mark of the Beast prophecy.

As noted in the news lately, scannable implants and tattoo transmitters are becoming more sophisticated, adding “prophetic” components—such as merging human biological matter with transistors to create living, implantable machines. Related science also envisions “smart” chimeric vaccines that literally rewrite DNA. Add to that the draconian commentary from America’s top health advisors lately, and it is not difficult to imagine how the dreaded mark of the Beast could unfold in the very near future. Bill Gates wants a “digital certificate” to show who has recovered from Covid-19 before they can fully move around in the marketplace. Dr. Anthony Fauci has joined Gates in calling for some type digital tracking system without which people will not be able to return to work or shop at their local grocery. High tech companies like SuperCom have even produced scalable electronic monitoring and tracking platforms they say are ready now to keep an eye on all, both small and great. And some states in the U.S. and other countries have already decided to make the coronavirus vaccine legally mandatory. I personally believe the possibility that the Mark of the Beast could arrive through a version of one of these vaccine technologies is plausible, if not altogether likely.

I also believe THE MESSENGER, aka the Apophis-Wormwood asteroid, is carrying an alien microbe with a virus that will serve as the “trigger” that sets in motion this end-times activity.

In addition to Wormwood and the Mark of the Beast playing out in the middle of the Great Tribulation period, THE MESSENGER also mysteriously and dynamically connects my vision of the pope (free with the upcoming THE MESSENGER program offer), and the vision of Apophis from 2019, to the judgment of Mystery Babylon, which I believe will also transpire in the midst of Daniel’s seventy weeks.

I was asked recently by the host of one of the largest Christian TV programs what my seeing the resignation of Pope Benedict a year in advance has to do with the 2019 vision of Apophis? Why would God show me such random, seemingly unrelated things? Until now my response has been “I do not know? It’s like I am seeing pieces of a much larger picture I do not yet comprehend.

But recently it came to me, and now it seems so clear how these events are tied together. BOTH WORMWOOD-APOPHIS… AND THE JUDGMENT OF ROME AND ITS FALSE PROPHET… OCCUR SIMULTANEOUSLY IN THE MIDDLE OF THE GREAT TRIBULATION! THE VISIONS I HAVE RECEIVED ARE NOT TWO SEPARATE THINGS… BUT A BIRDS-EYE GLIMPSE OF TWO MAJOR PARTS OF THE END TIMES, SOON TO UNFOLD BILATERALLY, AND I PREDICT BETWEEN NOW AND 2029.

Now, let me explain a bit more about how Rome and the Pope will soon be combined with arrival of Wormwood.

Both Catholics and protestant evangelicals see the current Pope echoing a prophesied roll in pushing socialism, the system Antichrist will employ. In fact several Catholic defenders of the Faith including the largest Catholic News agencies in the world (CAN and EWTN News) as well as Rome’s leading theologians like Archbishop Carlo Viganò have recently stated publicly that Francis is this man from the Books of Revelation and Daniel, even writing letters to President Trump to warn him that Francis is leading the way for the ‘children of darkness’ we see on the streets calling for a Marxist/Socialist uprising.

BUT FOR MYSTIC CATHOLICS... IT’S MUCH MORE THAN THAT. Many of them believe in The Prophecy of the Popes, which predicted 900-years ago that 112 pontiffs—from the day St. Malachy had his divine vision in Rome and forward—would arrive, with the last one ruling over the Vatican when the church and world enter the great tribulation period according to that prophecy. Francis is #112 on this list, and his namesake, Francis of Assisi, predicted this final pope would be a deceiver.

Now follow me here. In our bestselling book Petrus Romanus, I especially featured retired professor of the Pontifical Biblical Institute, eminent Catholic theologian, and former Jesuit priest, Malachi Martin, who had privileged information pertaining to secretive Church and world issues, including the Third Secret of Fátima, which many believe has never been released and that Martin hinted spelled out parts of a plan to formally install the dreaded False Prophet during a “Final Conclave.” Martin’s book, Windswept House depicted how a pope would be secretly forced from office (Benedict?) and replaced by a Jesuit-backed leader who would help establish a final New World Order (Francis?) under Antichrist.

More recently, in a shocking interview titled Is Francis the last Pope? which you can google and read for yourself, published by the two largest Catholic News agencies in the world, the personal secretary to Pope Benedict and the Prefect of the Papal Household for Pope Francis, Archbishop George Gänswein was specifically asked about this “Prophecy of Malachy” better known as the Prophecy of the Popes, the retirement of Benedict, and whether Francis himself believes he is this last pontiff.

The interview began by making direct reference to questions that I myself had raised regarding the dual lightning strikes atop St. Peter’s Basilica on the evening of February 11, 2013, on the same day of Benedict’s public resignation announcement. I followed that with commentary about the inauguration of Francis and how, “for a few adepts of history and secret orders,” this sign from Heaven was deliciously staged. I had written that because the term “inaugurate” is from the Latin inauguro and refers to the archaic ceremony by which the Roman augurs (“soothsayers”) approved a king or ruler through lightning omens as being “sanctioned by the gods.” As for Petrus Romanus, his “inauguration” was sealed by the same omen the ancient augurs used in determining the will of the gods for a king in that part of Rome—thunder and lightning as the most important auspice and sign that Jupiter—the father of Apollo—was watching.

It turns out that I was not alone in my ponderings, as the Catholic news agencies confirmed, writing: “many observers chose to interpret this (lightning strikes) as a divine reaction to the historical announcement of Pope Benedict’s resignation, made that very morning.” Then the catholic article went on to say, “As his personal secretary, Archbishop Gänswein, reminisced about how both he and Benedict only found out about the lightning strike after the event and that the impression to them was “one of a sign from above, a reaction,” Gänswein told Badde who conducted the interview. When Ganswein showed Benedict images of the spectacular incident a few days later, the pope asked whether this was some kind of digital montage, Gänswein said, before adding: “however, nature had spoken,’” he said, echoing what I had published online in 2013.

But then the astonishing report made an important disclosure, adding: “During the interview, Paul Badde referenced… The “Prophecy of the Popes”—according to which, Pope Francis may be considered to be the last pope, to which Archbishop Gänswein admitted: “Indeed, when looking at the prophecy, and considering how there was always a sound reference to popes mentioned in its history—that gives me the shivers [and] speaking from historical experience, one has to say: Yes, this is a wake-up call.”

Now think about that folks... given that both current popes and their closest advisors at the Vatican have considered whether Pope Francis is the last pope—Petrus Romanus—and that the reality “gives them the shivers” and is perceived by them as “a wake-up call,” is it any wonder that conservative scholars within the Catholic Church have taken an increasingly careful view of pope Francis? And is the subsequent question of whether Pope Francis is the “False Prophet” the reason Canon Lawyers and Theologians for the Vatican hosted a Conference in Paris a while back to discuss “how to depose a heretical pope”?.

Keep in mind that Catholic and Protestants historically have viewed the Prophecy of the Popes as only one of many omens predicting the role that Rome would play in the end times and that ultimately the predicted destruction of the seven-hilled city of Rome—which I believe could very well happen as Apophis rains down asteroid debris in 2029—also identifies the Roman Catholic Church as “MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH” (Revelation 17:5). This woman that rides the scarlet-colored beast is very clearly described by John as a city that sits on seven mountains that rules over the kings of the earth (cf. Revelation 17:9; 17:8). At the time John wrote this, there was only one city on seven hills that ruled over the kings of the earth and that was Rome. Now while Rome as a military and political force eventually disappeared from history, the seven hilled city continued as a spiritual and religious force that continues to this day to host the kings of the earth, which bow to kiss the pope’s ring.

If one accepts the veracity of Malachy’s vision, which many Catholics do, then the Roman Catholic Church is necessarily the woman who rides the beast.

But how else might this connect to 2029, Apophis as Wormwood, and the final pope? The final lines of the Prophecy of the Popes also predict that Rome will be destroyed: “In extreme persecution, the seat of the Holy Roman Church will be occupied by Peter the Roman, who will feed the sheep through many tribulations; when they are over, the city of seven hills will be destroyed, and the terrible and fearsome Judge will judge his people.”

This seems to corresponds with:

• The book of Revelation 17–18, which speaks of her fiery destruction.

• The seven hundred-year old Zohar which says just before Messiah arrives the “kings of the earth” will gather in Rome and will suddenly be killed by fiery objects falling from the sky. Could that be asteroid debris from the breakup of Apophis / Wormwood?

• Allegedly the true 3rd Secret of Fatima and other Catholic sources likewise describe Rome being destroyed by fiery heavenly objects.

• Even the Sibylline Oracles Book 2 prophesied of end-times Rome and what sounds like asteroid debris: And then shall, after these, appear of men, The tenth race, when the earth-shaking Lightener Shall break the seal for idols and shall shake the people of seven-hilled Rome, and riches great shall perish, burned by Vulcan's fiery flame. And then shall bloody signs from heaven descend. Of course Vulcan, mentioned here by Apollo’s seer, is the god that Manly P. Hall said empowers the Freemasons hands with “the seething energies of Lucifer,” and it was Malachi Martin who said the Freemasons would be the Superforce behind bringing Rome under control of Antichrist.

By the way, it wasn’t only Malachi Martin who said the Vatican under the papacy of a Jesuit would become a machine of Antichrist’s final world order. Numerous other famous priests and theologians in the Catholic church have taught and warned the same for hundreds of years including one of the most famous—Dr. Henry Edward Cardinal Manning, the Lord Archbishop of Westminster from 1865–1892.

Let me introduce myself…

My name is Katherine Horn, and I typically work “behind the scenes” here at SkyWatch Television and Defender Publishing as a supervisor and manager over the staff in our shipping department and online store. My husband is Joe Horn, the COO of SkyWatch, resident health and supplements specialist, and author of Timebomb, Everyday Champions, and Unlocking Eden. Though you would likely recognize him, you may not recognize me, as I haven’t yet put myself “out there” in the same way he has. Nevertheless, with Simply HIS (SkyWatch TV’s upcoming show for women) launching just around the corner, I have to start somewhere…and I guess there’s no time or place like this present magazine to share how Simply HIS has become enormously important to me of late.

As a quick bit of background (I know Donna mentioned it in a previous article, but I will refresh everyone): My parents were missionaries partnering with the Assemblies of God to serve abroad in the South Pacific. I was born into the family while they were stationed in the Solomon Islands. I grew up living in Majority World countries (what used to be referred to as “Third World countries” before that term recently became politically incorrect in some circles), and I traveled around quite a bit. The cultural diversity I witnessed throughout the earlier half of my life is immense! Of course, this sort of lifestyle over a matter of years gives a person a unique perspective, including, at times, a more open mind to theology in the context of global (and not just Western) Christianity.

Through all of that, however, one deeply instilled theological concept has never changed. In fact, it has only grown more obvious as a result of my travel-heavy background: All people—from all philosophical upbringings, educational experiences, environmental/social surroundings, and walks of life—are in need of a Savior, and the power He has to change lives and reach people right where they are at…no matter where that is in the world!

As a child, I wanted to become a midwife or OBGYN, as well as a pediatrician. I knew that women and children’s health was very overlooked where I grew up, and I had a deep thirst to make a difference in this area. Though my circumstances have so far taken me in a different direction, that calling has remained heavy on my heart for decades. Sometimes (and I know many readers will relate) our “calling” is not the same as our “career,” and I have come to accept that reality for myself, knowing that I don’t necessarily have to draw a paycheck in the area of my passions in order to be used mightily wherever God has called me to serve. As a result, I find that I have never stopped dreaming about being able to assist women and children, and throughout the years, He has given me grand opportunities to make a difference right where I’m at.

Many readers who have kept up with SkyWatch TV, Defender Publishing, and Whispering Ponies Ranch (WPR) know how centrally focused these sister ministries are in aiding women and children. Our work with Royal Family Kids Camp (RFKC) was only the beginning and, as Tom has made clear in many recent articles, we have made enormous strides in assisting relief organizations in the area of human trafficking, such as that of Jaco Booyen’s “Eight Days Ministries.” Along the way, I have been front and center of every one of these developments, not only as an observer, but as one who dives in with complete abandon and with as much support as I can muscle in. So far, though these efforts have touched countless women, this service has been primarily toward children and youth, which is a worthy endeavor for certain. The journey has been extremely fulfilling.

God puts the appetite in people’s hearts toward a call, and regardless of how that hunger plays out in our thoughts (like my dream of being a practitioner), God is faithful to complete the work He began in us (Philippians 1:6), tweaking our actions along the way to conform to His thoughts!

Isn’t that just like God? His plan is perfect, and His timing is perfect!

Fast forward to today: Joe and I just celebrated our twentieth wedding anniversary (we married in 2000). We have four amazing kids ages fifteen, eleven, six, and three. They definitely keep us on our toes! (By the way, each of our kiddos is a miracle! Doctors told us we would never have our own children. Now, four kids later—Well, that is an article for another day...) As a couple, Joe and I have both been heavily involved with SkyWatch TV and WPR ministries, and we have watched as many young boys and girls respond positively over and over again by the outreach programs we’ve implemented. I can’t say it enough: That is the most rewarding feeling to be a part of something like this!

Yet, when left to my own thoughts, the draw I feel inside toward ministering to women has never subsided.

Truth be told, it has only grown…

Imagine the rapture I felt when Nita Horn, my mother-in-law, was first struck with the inspiration to launch Simply HIS. I would say I was “floating on cloud nine,” but that overused idiom doesn’t even touch the euphoria I felt that day at the women’s conference when Nita’s magnum opus brainchild was born. I remember pointing and laughing at the pathetic “cloud nine” as I flew past it to dance on higher clouds. (Truth be told, I never really understood the significance of “nine” when it came to Google. I remember asking, “Google, how do you get to the moon?” Yeah, I was that thrilled!

Not only had God connected me to children’s ministries in a way that I hadn’t seen coming before, He was now bringing the desires of my heart regarding women to the forefront in a radical way.

Let me tell you all more specifically why I am so excited to be involved in Simply HIS. As a woman, I know firsthand how important it is to have ministries that relate to our needs and issues. But, as a woman, I also see the significant deficit of ministries for women that are truly, genuinely effective at providing real help when and where it’s needed! The bouts of loneliness that I’ve faced as a wife and mother have, at times, been tremendous. The fears I’ve faced raising God-fearing children in an extremely scary world that, by the day, becomes increasingly hostile to conservative, Christian families have taken their toll here and there throughout the years. The balancing act I’m required to hold down while I’m a full-time supervisor/manager at work and a soccer mom driving my kids to sports and gymnastics is a chaotic reality that, although stressful, represents the same conundrum that many women are in every day.

Despite this—and with no offense directed to any well-meaning ministry of the past—most women’s ministries I’ve seen have been more or less a mere band-aid to the hurt, instead of a cure. Having other women to stand alongside and “get real” with (as Nita and Donna have said in previous articles), those women we can gather counsel and encouragement from, is crucially important. That community of women can often be the very thing that carries us through whatever we are going through, and that assistance is huge. It’s simply everything!

We don’t always see that we need those mentors in our life, or that community of women, but we do. Many times, women fall into thinking we’re alone in trial or pain, that there isn’t anyone else going through the same things we are (or have the same feelings as we do), but, as I have repeatedly learned, that is “a lie straight outta hell.” You are NEVER alone, and the emotions you feel are NEVER new to the human race. That’s precisely the brand of falsehood the enemy wants the daughters of the King to believe so that our Precious Savior’s ministry to women might be discredited.

Thankfully, God has blessed me with some great mentors in my life: women who have been amazing role models for what a godly woman ought to be. Though some have passed on, each of them have left a lasting imprint on my life, showing that they are always present to be there for me, loving me and encouraging me through everything I face, offering that listening ear or that shoulder to cry on.

Isn’t that something that we all want out of life? To know that our life had meaning? To rest assured that we left an impression on someone else’s life, and that someone out there remembers it?

Our Simply HIS programming is not “just another women’s TV show” built for the purposes of trading low-carb recipes, talking about handbags, or hen-cackling about “who dumped who” in Hollywood. I know I speak for my cohosts (Nita, Allie, and Donna) when I say that our uttermost passion in bringing Simply HIS to the table is to shoot straight past fluff and filler and dig right into “the meat” of women’s issues: To be that encouragement, to show women love and demonstrate that they are not alone; to be the voice that others can trust and rely on while tackling those hard conversations we ladies don’t always know how to talk about; to be that badly-needed “grounding” when we women, as we often do, play that darn “comparison game,” buying into the idea that everyone else around us is better than we are, smarter than we are, prettier, skinnier…

Meanwhile, social media makes it easier every day for people to project what they want others to see or believe about their life, so even when we compare to what’s in front of us, it’s primarily based on a false front, anyway: the perfect family, the perfect life, the perfect job, etc. Half the time, that “perfect family” isn’t as golden as they pretended to be, and after spending years trying to become them, we watch as they fall apart, regardless of all those pretty pictures with sweet captions clinging to their Facebook walls. Social media simply isn’t reality!

Still, we strive to take eight million selfies to get that “right angle” so we can be as good-looking as that one girl from work, or as thin as Mrs. Jog-a-thon from church. We make sure all the kids in the photo are glowing with happiness instead of throwing Legos across the couch at each other… and if they aren’t glowing, we make them glow! (There are filters for that, by the way...) We glance over here and compare, then over there and evaluate, then back over here to compete, all the while trying to be more successful at work, have narrower waistlines in the fitting room at the department store, reflect more voluminous lips and lashes in the mirror, snap pictures of only-ever-smiling children, satisfy our husbands’ bellies, pick up dog poop, lose weight, stay on top of the dishes and laundry, keep up with the Joneses, respond to those thirty-three texts and forty-two social media notifications, and if we miss just one thing on this list, we are “failures.”

Dude…

Right?

Women tend to be their own worst enemy, and we want to help when “help” is nowhere to be found and loneliness closes in. We want to honestly, genuinely BE that “breathe of fresh air” for the suffocating, that “drink of cold water” for the thirsty. It is vitally important for us women to stick together and hold each other up, NOT tear each other down! Women are powerful creatures! Within each of us is the power to be influencers! Think about it: With just a simple smile to the other mom in the store with the screaming child (we’ve all been there), we can let her know she is doing a good job! Buying a cup of coffee for the car behind us, or sending a card of encouragement to someone God has put on your heart, can make someone’s 2020 a better one (and don’t we all need that right now?!)! It is crazy how far a simple gesture can go.

It’s what my husband would call a “soul massage”: that deeply, deeeeeeply satisfying, therapeutic touch in a specific area of life you didn’t even know you needed. It’s that “it factor” that appeared in your day that alleviates tension and soothes frazzled nerves when all other promising remedies have failed.

Yes, you’re allowed to laugh out loud at this newly coined but ridiculous-sounding term Joe created. But here’s the deal: Some phrases that used to have meaning (“light in the darkness”; “calm in the storm”; etc.) now just sound syrupy, thanks to our culture’s frequent (and insincere) use of these otherwise beautiful words. It’s not fair that when we develop a ministry around actually reaching these glorious “light” and “calm” goals, we can’t openly identify those goals for what they are without painting them on a fresh, untainted canvas. As I find myself at a true loss for words to describe what is at the heart of Simply HIS, I suddenly feel drawn to the verbiage that my adorable husband has reinvented.

So, as bizarro as a “soul massage” might sound to someone hearing it for the first time, it does have merit in describing what we behind Simply HIS endeavor to be—that light in the darkness; the calm in the storm; that TRUE place of rest for every woman of every race, color, creed, and in every phase of life. We want to reach through the screen and work together with women to show them that they—no, YOU—are loved, just as you are, and that God has a plan for your life no matter what you think of yourself or what your struggles are. You amount to greatness!

Not convinced? Then tune into our show, I dare you. I double-dog dare you (oooooohh) to tune into the program with an open mind and risk the chance that you might just get that “soul massage” you’ve been looking for.

My childhood dream of ministering to hurting women is about to materialize…and if you’re watching, you’ll see it happen.
The Time For Willful Ignorance Is Over.

Among the seven things that Proverbs 6:16-19 tells us God hates are the hands which shed the blood of the innocent, and the minds which devise wicked imaginations. With this in mind, there can be no doubt that God hates the sexual exploitation and trafficking of our most innocent members of society.

But, one may ask, is human trafficking really an issue in this modern day? Is it a foreign problem, or does it exist here in America? Furthermore, does the buying and selling of human beings for sexual exploitation take place solely in certain realms of society, or is it rampant all throughout? These and other questions are those sought to be answered by Josh Peck and other experts in Silent Cry: the newest investigative documentary released by SkyWatch Films.

Silent Cry shows its viewer that beneath the seemingly placid surface of society exists a dark, sinister truth: that human trafficking occurs in every American zip code, demographic, and socio-economic class. It impacts every race and holds no respect to gender, and despite the growing awareness of this terrible reality, still, less than one percent of trafficking-related crimes are reported to the authorities. And, while many imagine this monstrosity to be a foreign problem, the truth is that the US is one of the biggest purchasers of this exploitation. In fact, as many as eighty percent of all cases of human trafficking involve US citizens, and in nearly half of those cases, those being sold are minors.

When it comes to such atrocities as human trafficking and the sexual exploitation of children, there is no justification for such deviant acts. Josh Peck’s investigative journey which resulted in the making of Silent Cry began after reading Shadowland by Tom Horn. Peck wanted to see where the issue of trafficking surfaced in society, and wondered how far its ripple effects went. As his investigation continued, he found that the concern permeated not only the elite political circles of power, but that it was rampant in small towns across the nation as well. Calling in leading authorities who spend their lives fighting this monstrosity, Josh Peck gathered such experts as Jaco Booyens, David Heavener, Thomas Dunn, Joe Horn, Steven Bancarz, and Dr. Thomas Horn to discuss this sweeping epidemic. Ilonka Deaton, former trafficking victim from the age of twelve to seventeen years old, bravely shares her own story in this ground-breaking documentary. She outlines, that, contrary to what many might expect, the perpetrator is often a slow moving, methodical individual who lays the groundwork for their exploitation by slowly grooming their intended victim and building the trust of these unsuspecting individuals and their families.

“All day that we are allowed to enjoy the freedoms and pleasure this country has to offer, a growing number of children are having their innocence ripped away.”

Many would wonder how trafficking has become so widely rampant in our country, right under our noses? How has this atrocity come to be in the land of the free? Jaco Booyens, in an exclusive interview, explains that it occurs when a culture has normalized sex through pornography, sexual exploitation, saturation of subject matter, political correctness, and even by bringing a deluge of illicit information into our school systems. In a land where sexual deviance thrives in plain sight, modern cultural cues reinforce these behaviors, “aiding and abetting the most heinous crime on our planet, and that’s sexually exploiting children.” Not only do adults become acclimated to the sexualized circumstances of people who are targeted at perpetually younger ages, through such avenues as TV, media and social media, and even ads and billboards; but the embracing of the behavior is culturally conditioned to our youth as well. This occurs through such outlets as educational indoctrination, exposure through media, and grooming via readily available pornography, the influence of role-models and trusted adults, and even peers.

So, how far throughout our culture does this problem go? In Silent Cry, Josh Peck investigates this matter, showing that the issue runs deeply through the seat of our culture: infiltrating the political system, the Hollywood scene, and all levels of business circles. Unfortunately, this terrible element even permeates some religious realms; with deeply seated origins tracing back to ancient satanic religions which indulge unspeakable practices. As Christians, we know that we are covered by the blood of Jesus, and that His blood has served as currency for the purchase of our souls in the spiritual realm. Could it be that, in a twisted counterfeit fashion, the forces of evil crave the blood of innocents to feed their evil appetites? Silent Cry answers this question and many others like it, and the answers will shock you.

Furthermore, are events such as the apparent “suicide” of Jeffrey Epstein representative of factual occurrences, or was the man a type of “sacrifice,” made by a larger industry to cover for a wider realm of perpetrators? Peck’s investigative search into circumstances surrounding Epstein’s death suggests that the latter may be the case. Similarly, Josh Peck’s research reveals that beyond the deviant sexual exploits of the wicked mind, the roots to such perversions actually date back to ancient satanic rituals—tracing to civilizations such as Egyptian, Aztecan, and Mayan cultures, among others—which occur at the cost of our most innocent members of society. Furthermore, Silent Cry even outlines some ties connecting human sex trafficking and human sacrifice.

While Silent Cry has the boldness to investigate these unspeakable subjects, there is likewise a balance in discretion: it does not describe specific acts of exploitation in detail, nor are these images acted out on screen. Thus, the viewer is made aware of the severity of this issue without being exposed to sensationalistic narrative or gruesome visual scenes.

For many, trafficking has been perceived as a heinous crime against humanity; but one which happens to faceless, nameless victims on the other side of the world. Silent Cry, however, shows that this is not the case. Josh Peck reveals that this atrocity occurs right here, in our own American towns and cities. Additionally, the children who are violated in this way—more than 500,000 per day—are cruelly and repeatedly trafficked on an “average of five to fifteen times per day.” Additionally, measures of recruiting are lurking in our own backyards: children’s organizations, foster homes, social media avenues, and even same-aged peers! Peck stuns his audience by revealing that, currently, the most commonly targeted demographic for manipulation is the last that an individual would suspect: with familial and trusted-acquaintance trafficking now being the fastest growing type of exploitation. Even worse, children who are being victimized in trafficking circles have a life expectancy of 7 only years under such circumstances if they are not intervened for. Allow me to repeat this point: children who are not rescued from circumstances of human trafficking will likely be killed, commit suicide, or otherwise die as a result of their harsh circumstances within an average of 7 years. This brutal truth means that we must act now! It is time to stop burying our heads in the sand and imagining that this problem occurs somewhere else.

It is time to stand up and act.

But what does it mean to take a stand? What can one individual do, when the problem seems so rampant and overwhelming? How does one confront the brutal truth of sexual exploitation that surrounds us in this modern age? Furthermore, how should a Christian respond to this issue, and what can parents do to ensure the safety of their own children and others in their communities? Silent Cry gives its viewers good news. Believe it or not, as parents and Christians we are not powerless. There are many steps that we can take to help fight trafficking in our neighborhoods and communities. There is surprisingly much we can do even at our local level to fight this monstrosity. It is time to wake up and see the problem, address it, and fight back.

It is time to respond to the Silent Cry of the innocent.
My first film, Silent Cry: The Darker Side of Trafficking, had only been out for a couple weeks when I received a message through Facebook. It was from someone who follows me, Karen, and she asked if she could donate some billboard space to promote the film. I had never been offered something like that before and didn’t fully understand what she was kindly offering, so I gave her my email address and asked for more details. As it turns out, Karen runs AZ Billboard outside of Phoenix, Arizona. She had seen my film, was moved by it, and wanted to donate an entire billboard front overlooking a much-used highway in Arizona to help promote the film.

Of course, I was exceedingly grateful for her offer and accepted immediately. In no time at all (a matter of days), the billboard was up for the world to see. Karen was even kind enough to post pictures on social media (as seen in the image above), stating that she and her company stand behind us in our fight against the evils of child sex trafficking.

Of course, I was exceedingly grateful for her offer and accepted immediately. In no time at all (a matter of days), the billboard was up for the world to see. Karen was even kind enough to post pictures on social media (as seen in the image above), stating that she and her company stand behind us in our fight against the evils of child sex trafficking.

In the film, we lay out several ways the individual at home can get involved in this fight. Karen is one shining example of using creativity and what God has provided her to make a real difference. I want to publicly thank Karen and her amazing company for this generous donation—not only on behalf of us at SkyWatchTV, SkyWatch Films, and Whispering Ponies Ranch (WPR), but also for all the children whose lives might be radically changed by this raising of awareness and the brave people fighting on the front lines.

The way we can change this culture around is to do what Karen did: creatively use the things the Lord has provided us. That may not always come in the form of a billboard company, but everyone has something they can contribute, even if it’s sharing a kind word or an informative article on social media. Remember, too, that 100% of profits from Silent Cry goes to Whispering Ponies Ranch, a place where children who have been rescued from sex trafficking can heal and learn to live a fulfilling life in Christ. Anything we can do to raise awareness about this film and the problem as a whole will go a long way in creating a safer society for our children.

Thank you Karen and everyone at AZ Billboard, and thank you to all of you who have watched the film, left honest reviews on Amazon, shared truthful information, talked with friends and family, and for the prayers you are making for those actively involved in the fight.

God bless you all!

Greetings from the Ranch!

Did you know that horses have amazing personalities? I have found that, just like us people, each horse is a unique individual with his or her own character traits, temperament, disposition, and natural methods of communication. Some are dominant, confident, or assertive. Others are submissive, calm, and tolerant. Still there are those who come out of their mother’s womb acting timid, nervous…afraid of their own shadow (sometimes literally). The list goes on. Many people do not think of horses as having a “horsenality,” but believe me, they do. This brings my mind to a particular horse here on the ranch named “Rebel the Redeemed.”

A name like that obviously has a backstory…and this one promises not to disappoint. I’ll start at the very beginning and give you the fast version:

Irony of ironies, it was Tax Day, April 15, 2014, the most dreaded day of the year. Rebel came into the world as wobbly-legged and curious as any other miniature horse, but within days of his birth, he took on a particular air of belligerence. During the first few months of his life as a weanling (ha!) in the fields with his young peers, he had a way of letting every four-legged life in his immediate vicinity know that he was boss: the alpha male; the chief of the underlings; the commander over the grass…

The king.

The way he asserted himself wasn’t even close to subtle. It was embedded in his horsenality, yes, but it extended even into his appearance. With eyes so icy blue he could outperform the freezing stare of C. S. Lewis’ witch of Narnia, and a gorgeously contrasting coal-black coat—solid everywhere save for a single white sock and a gorgeous titanium blaze down his face—his confident prance about the pastures was a marvel.

He may have looked the role of a champion leader, and he certainly thought he was one, but he fit the definition of a bully more accurately. He had full run of the lower pastures where babies were kept, and was already “the britches of the farm” before he was weaned. Funny enough, he didn’t limit his provocations to only the little guys; he even found a way to pounce on his mama’s last nerve many times, if you can imagine that.

I continued to have hope that when he was old enough to begin his job-training (as a therapy horse, on or off the ranch, etc.), he would find the additional activity stimulating enough for his intelligence that we could secure a little cooperation. From there, we might be able to introduce a gradual submission to authority. And who knows? Maybe he would surprise me and his headstrong, dominating quirks from the field would translate into some sort of leadership quality after all!

Nope. Huh-uh. That’s not what happened. He wasn’t having it. There were no bones to be thrown from the king of the hill in those days. He was a…a… Well, he was a horse’s rear-end, for lack of better words.

All of the other weanlings obediently submitted to the process, but Rebel had a meltdown that played out as bad as any spoiled-child-in-a-candy-store scenario every time it was his turn to train. Each time I entered his pen, he pinned his ears straight back, squinted his eyes, and turned his rear towards me, which is a definite act of disrespect. I remember how he would run circles around me, avoiding my reach, kicking up his heels, thrashing about…and although he never got close enough to make contact, he was certainly communicating loud and clear: I was the heartless human that brought him out of his domain to the instruction site at the upper stables, so we couldn’t be friends. I was the next “baby horse” who had stepped out of line and needed to be brought back into submission. He was the sovereign ruler, the other horses were his rodeo roadies, the ranch was his throne room, and I was the two-legged servant who, on a good day, was lucky to lick the mud off his hooves.

Because of the delicate nature of our therapeutic ministry and the added responsibility that places on us to ensure safety on our land around our staff and visitors, Rebel’s continually confrontational, unpredictable, risky, and aggressive horsenality was rendering him a strong candidate for rehoming. Horses that become an active part of Whispering Ponies Ranch’s program must show gentleness, calmness, patience, and have an easy going attitude. He just wasn’t presenting a healthy fit to our ranch rules.

We didn’t make any decisions immediately, as we understand that there are occasions where grooming a miniature horse for his or her therapy job takes time, but this particular horse wasn’t budging from his antagonistic conduct. Meanwhile, three other colts were progressing leaps and bounds ahead of Rebel, and it started to feel like misplaced stewardship of our staff’s time and efforts to keep adjusting the cogwheels of a machine that only sprang to life long enough to turn and kick its engineer.

Reluctantly, I turned my focus more towards the easier prospects while I prayerfully considered what to do with Rebel—a horse who had now officially earned the name that described his demeanor. Removing him from the ranch entirely would cure many ills at this point, and as bummed as it made me feel, I had already accepted this was likely going to be the next step.

God, however, had other plans (as He often does). A “rebel” in the hands of God “ain’t no thang,” as they say. Intervention came swiftly through one of our volunteer handlers, James Howell, who took a particular interest in this high-spirited horse, this firecracker, choosing to accept the challenge head-on and take the renegade animal under his wing. James went out of his way and specifically requested to work with Rebel, which was a bit surprising under the circumstances.

But goodness! What in the world did I have to lose at that point, right? As a volunteer, James also had nothing to lose, as he could make potential progress with Rebel his only goal.

So I surrendered the halter and lead rope to James with little more than a “good luck” nod and went back to my work with the other docile horses.

James, keeping true to his expressed interests, worked with Rebel for a couple of hours daily. He showed a nearly inhuman level of patience, yet he was firm, calm, and gentle every moment he was handling. In situations that I would have given up, James’ resolve only strengthened all the more. When Rebel pulled off his argumentative little quirks and jerks, James’ tone of voice became more corrective, but it never once lost that nurturing tone. When Rebel physically fought the rope and twisted around for control, James’ grip tightened steadfastly, but there was something about the way he handled that horse that remained consistently easygoing and friendly. And to my absolute surprise, within just three short days, Rebel quickly began to respond to James’s guidance.

Wonder of wonders, Rebel actually became very eager to please his new coach. They made huge strides together as they journeyed in and out of trailers on command, over piles of gravel, through scary mud puddles...anywhere James asked his little buddy to go and anything he asked him to do, Rebel gladly followed.

A wonderful partnership was born.

Because of the investment James made in Rebel, exercising unconditional love and acceptance, a bond that permanently set a higher standard of training was formed. James was, as his biblical namesake commanded us to be, “quick to listen, slow to speak, and slow to become angry” (James 1:19).

Obviously, we were thrilled with this amazing transition from the “rebel that left the ranch” story to the testimony that ensued: He was restored to his purpose, and would now be spending a lifetime here, with his original herd-mates, moving on to become one of our “veteran go-to” horses for cart programs, entertaining visitors of all ages.

How ’bout that, eh?

Rebel became a leader after all.

But this is only the beginning of Rebel’s value to our ministry. Here at the ranch, in the dormitory we call the “Pony Building,” each room is dedicated to one of our program horses, and the name of that horse is displayed on a plate just outside the door so our guests (big and small) can identify with our therapy “ponies” during their stay. Kids especially love to walk up the hill via Pony Row, where the paddocks are lined up like dominoes, to meet their host dorm-horse. Rebel’s name is among those that are featured in the Pony Building, and I have to admit, his is one I am particularly proud of. Each time I personally see it, I remember his pilgrimage from incorrigible to victorious.

A while back, during one of our week-long camps, Rebel’s name ended up covered so the kids could not see it. I thought at first that it might have been part of a game or activity—a scavenger hunt or something of that nature—but it was brought to my attention that the concealment had been intentional. Naturally, I felt I needed to look into it, not because I was offended or upset, but because these horses are a big responsibility. If one of them had done something worthy of having his or her nameplate covered, our staff would need to know in case that information led to a training adjustment on the ranch’s end. So I asked around a bit and discovered that it wasn’t a behavioral issue on behalf of the horse, but his name, itself, that was cause for concern.

At first glance, the moniker “Rebel” might identify with bad behavior, which, when left outside the context and history of our veteran cart-horse’s story, could possibly put out the wrong idea for a camp filled with children. I found that to be understandable logic, but, having personal familiarity with the redemptive tale behind it all, I saw an opportunity to celebrate something positive (and biblical) with our visitors, so I quickly told them everything: Our little horse was once the “rebel” with no promise, no training, and no future or purpose on the ranch, until someone showed kindness, took a deeper interest and closer look at the heart of a troubled pony, believed in the “second chance,” and invested in Rebel, leading him from rebellion to redemption! I was proud to announce that Rebel now had new direction on the ranch as a vital part of the permanent program, and tell them of his new name, “Rebel the Redeemed!”

Of course I had been proud before, but as the account was coming from my mouth and I was hearing it aloud that day, I understood what this meant on a deeper level, and now I share it with you—

A label that once represented a downfall had been repurposed, rebranded, reformed into a true and eternal identity! The testimony of Rebel is a Gospel parallel, no doubt about it, and his new, complete name means the precise opposite of bad behavior and hopelessness. It stands for excellent behavior as a result of the patient handler who believed in him beyond his natural (fallen?) state.

What a witness this little horse has become to these children... What an opportunity he has become to share the work of Christ in so many lives. Instead of “kids identifying with a rebel,” we have been given the unique opportunity to view this as “kids identifying with one redeemed!” When Rebel’s testimony is shared with our young visitors, they learn that if God could give a second chance to an unruly, defiant little black and white horse, then God can and will do the same for them! This is the same God whose Word unabashedly acknowledges that He watches over, values, and cares for every bird of the air; it is our responsibility to tell these young people that God all the more watches over them, values them, cares for them, and has providential plans for their life (Matthew 6:26).

Thanks to Rebel, that lesson just got a lot easier to teach.

Today, Rebel enjoys handing out cart rides and pony kisses, which lands on the children visitors as his own communication of acceptance. There’s nothing about him that comes across as a threat to them, but he does have a way of communicating. That’s the neat thing about horses. They “whisper.” They have ways of telling their own story to those “with ears to hear” them. They have ways of witnessing about redemption through relationships like that of Rebel and James.

The moral of today’s SkyWatch Magazine article: Never judge a young and rowdy heart before someone (perhaps you?) makes an honest effort to reach out and rebuild trust, offer guidance, and show unconditional, firm-handed love. Do not be quick to disregard people (or a horse!) who may demonstrate rowdy behavior or bad habits. Perhaps, just like Rebel the Redeemed, a person may only need someone trustworthy to take a deeper look into his or her life and future and add a little extra patience, clear direction, firm guidance, gentleness, and of course the “second chance”…

Oh yes—as for James, he is no longer a full-time volunteer with the horses. His ranch work has become part-time as a wonderful asset to our weanlings and youthful horse training program, but he hasn’t actually gone anywhere. Most of his time is still given as a volunteer, but these days that manifests into the paper you hold in your hands. Yeah. This magazine? It’s all him. (Thank you, James!)

In closing, I leave you with these happy thoughts:

“Fear Not, for I have redeemed thee; I have called thee by name; thou art mine” (Isaiah 43:1).

“Verily I say unto you, ‘Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein.’ And He took them up in His arms, put His hand upon them, and blessed them” (Mark 10:15–16).

Be blessed,
In Christ, for the kids…

Who among us are shepherds? What does that even mean? Is the devising of folly sin? Is the scoffer an abomination (c.f., Proverbs 24:9)?

Health is the confluence of our minds, body, and spirit. We divide those topics out for discussion, but they are, in fact, inseparable. Our totality is governed as a whole by God and we should live within that example. God is the God of the body and mind as well as the spirit. Should we respect one invalid separation above another or do they all deserve reverence as God’s gift?

Too long have we left our flocks unattended and allowed the wolves to come in and undermine our charge. The current scenario that has unfolded in the US and around the world has been revealing, to say the least. What has been shown is that—regardless of our history, desire, or personal opinion—developed nations and the United States are not well. In fact, we have a resident sickness. It is not the result of too few masks or not enough vaccines. Through our lack of overall health, the fact is demonstrated that the vast majority of deaths represent those who were not in good general health to begin with. Studies reveal that people who have passed from this terrible virus were overwhelmingly undernourished and have co-morbidities and significant metabolic disorders. How is that?

I truly believe that an immense majority of Americans would have never wanted to be, let alone materially contribute to, the current situation we find ourselves in. The reality is, I believe, a culmination of the neglect of things the average person could or would not take time to understand, the exploitation of our populace for profit by the unholy alliances between media and corporations, and black holes in the leadership of our government. Legislatively, not one move has been made by any leader that would render us healthier as a nation; in fact, the decisions put in place have almost exclusively made us sicker. We don’t have anything to truly clean up our air, food, and water—God’s creation for us to be sustained.

The basis for life.

Oft overlooked is the trajectory of these viruses. The events that are occurring now were easily predictable. The cascade of ever more potent viruses has increased every year for decades. Do we believe this trend will suddenly turn the other direction on its own? Will we have a vaccine for the next one? What about the one after that? If we do not address the base health of humanity and our ecology, we will have willingly led to the downfall of our people.

This problem did not arise recently. It is the result of decades of the interweaving of business and our government as well as our inability to hold the “powers that be” accountable. A big part of this can be laid at the feet of campaign financing.
Corporations spend hundreds of billions of dollars per year lobbying our politicians and buying special access to legislation that you will never have. With this access, they write our laws: “The Big Agriculture business” writes our farming laws, pharmaceutical companies write our medical doctrines, mining companies write our mining laws, and banks write our economic policies. Case in point: Following the financial crisis in 2008 under then-President George W. Bush, a newly elected President Barack Obama promptly put all of those same bankers back in charge of his new cabinet. Not only would they elude accountability, but these same people that led to the problem would be the ones to reconstruct our financial policies. It’s been downhill ever since.

Eisenhower tried to warn us against the unwarranted influence of the military industrial complex; it seems, however, that the voice of profit won out over the voice of virtue.

The world is on fire.

As it pertains to health, the agricultural and pharmaceutical industries really started to flex their muscles in the 1950s, but it really became foundational in the 1970s with the approval of the antibiotic Round Up. Pesticides, fungicides, and herbicides had been in use at that time, but they were about to get a big shot of steroids. Further, the patenting of seeds and the rise of GMO production would lead to companies owning our food supplies and punishing any smaller, would-be farming operations that stood against them, pushing them out of business. These corporations would go on to poison our land and give us seedless foods that can’t be replicated (among many other crimes). This has left a wake of disease and death that has cost the lives and joy of countless, literally countless, families. The poisoned soil they left us with is barren, and now they scoff at our provincial ideas and will not be held to account in this life.

“Do not be overcome by evil, but overcome evil with good” (Romans 12:21; NIV).

Barren. Think about what happens when a seed is tossed on barren ground… That is where we have left our soil. It does not contain the nourishment needed to keep us happy, healthy, and functioning. There is no life without taking in the sustenance that comes exclusively from our soil, just the way God created it. Our hubris is such that we think we know better. We are the salt of the earth, unfortunately, and much of that salt is missing. What happens when we are not good stewards of the dominion we have been given and fulfill God’s law the way we were designed to?

Suffering.

I am almost always personally an advocate for the freedom of choice: The idea that we generally have it instilled within us to competently make our own decisions in regards to our lives. But I am bothered by people being directly misled in a way that it ultimately leads them to addiction. The policies put forth by the “Big Agriculture business,” pharmaceutical companies, and the media have left our people at the mercy of an “indoctrinated desire”—when you can’t put down that food because of the flavor enhancers that caused you to have an emotional reaction to what you’re eating—and it is the same with soda and many other common foods. People are not aware that, by using the addictive ingredients these businesses are putting into our food, it supplants your free will: They are deciding what you like and what you will pay for, rigging the system to compel you to come back…all at the cost of our free will and health.

Is this not the fast that I have chosen: to loose the chains of injustice and untie the cords of the yoke, to set the oppressed free and break every yoke? Is it not to share your food with the hungry and to provide the poor wanderer with shelter—when you see the naked, to clothe them, and to not turn away from your own flesh in blood? Then your light will break forth like the dawn, and your healing will quickly appear; then your righteousness will go before you, and the glory of the lord will be your rearguard. (Isaiah 58: 6–8)

On one hand, I would love it if there was a temporal governing body I could trust to oversee the protection of God’s creation, preserving it with the reverence in which it is due. On the other hand, that is not happening. So what do we do?

I think the time has come for a pretty radical level of personal responsibility. I certainly wish it was the case that my fellow brothers and sisters did not have to wade through the morass that we have come to, but there is simply no other way at this time. Whether we landed here through exploitation, mild neglect, or ignorance (willful or otherwise), the only real answer is for each of us to take responsibility for our own health. It will never come from the powers that be in Washington. It is time for personal reflection, radical honesty, and a little soul searching.

We should all be asking: What am I contributing to? Can I afford to be ignorant?

We have to vote with our money. We must stop giving these parasites our treasures for the sake of convenience. It is time to restore our dominion and treat God’s creation with the respect and reverence it deserves.

Fortunately, God is ever-restoring and gives us the freedom to choose to break the chains and cast off the yoke of oppression: both the seen and the unseen.

Just as this tapestry has been woven, so can it be unwoven and repurposed as illustrated by God. The bodies’ nature is ever-redeeming, ever-regenerating—such is God’s grace.

We heal even when we don’t want to. The miracle is already here, just waiting for ears to listen and eyes to see (Proverbs 20:12), waiting for us to come home.

This is what the lord almighty said: “Administer true justice; show mercy and compassion to one another. Do not oppress the widow or the fatherless, the foreigner or the poor. Do not plot evil against each other” (Zechariah 7:9–10).

EDENS ESSENTIALS PREMIUM BROAD SPECTRUM CBD EXTRACTS

CBD is a powerful plant extract that has been used for wellness for thousands of years. Our CBD is derived from a specific strain of plant containing one of many cannabinoids that have a variety of effects on our body’s endocannabinoid system. In fact, we actually have receptors and compounds in our bodies that interact with these naturally occurring compounds.

Not all natural extracts are created equally, and most certainly not all CBD is the same. At Edens Essentials, we believe that if you want to create the best products available, excellence must be a priority at every stage. With this as a guidepost, we can partner with the right people and companies to achieve a high standard of business. To further our mission of creating the world’s best CBD products, we choose our partners very carefully. After extensive due-diligence, Edens Essentials decided to partner with the broker of the largest grower, manufacturer and distributor of plant-derived phytocannabinoids in the U.S. This partner makes the raw compounds we use in our products.

- Is fermented to unlock the full potential of this powerful herb
- Supports a healthy inflammatory response as well as liver and cardiovascular function
- Has been shown to assist the body’s maintenance of proper blood sugar levels.
- Maintains healthy digestion

Edens Fermented Turmeric is a revolutionary, highly absorbable probiotic-fermented organic turmeric rhizome and organic fermented ginger powder in their full spectrum state, cultivated with our partners signature probiotic-fermented delivery system. This provides maximum bioavailability, digestion and absorption.

For centuries, turmeric has been the quintessential herb choice for promoting liver health, maintaining healthy digestion, supporting a healthy inflammatory response and cardiovascular health.

Turmeric naturally has a high concentration of active compounds known as curcuminoids. Curcuminoids have poor water solubility and poor permeability, which may result in low absorption rates in the gut and can also limit its systemic availability. By fermenting both organic turmeric and ginger with our unique probiotic culture, this process is able to predigest the herbs’ naturally occurring compounds to deliver the full spectrum of these highly desirable phytocomponents at their full activity and in their most bioavailable forms.

DISPENSATIONS
The Clarence Larkin Collection
As a Bible teacher and author, Clarence Larkin’s books, charts, and wood cuts greatly influenced Protestant conservatives in early America as well as Church evangelism throughout the twentieth century. He is mostly known for his works on Dispensationalism, which considers biblical history, as well as the future of all creation and mankind’s role on earth, as divided into “ages.” (Within this context, “ages” are specific periods of time that God has set in motion that will ultimately reach their climatic end at the Great White Throne judgment—the moment when God will judge everybody that has ever lived according to their works, followed by their destiny in Heaven or Hell.)
